WHAT'S AN NSACAREER?

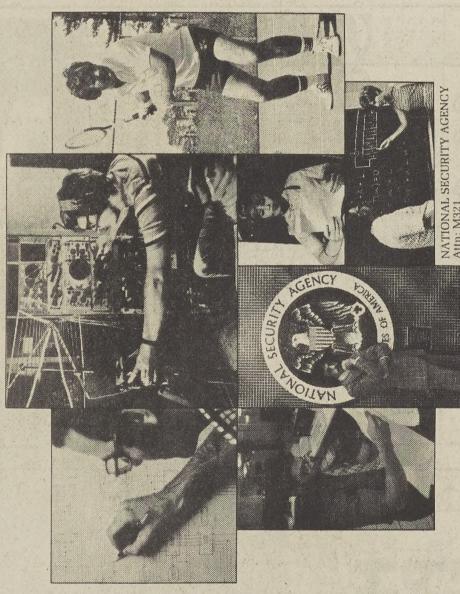

It's different things to different people

Of course, most of the employees at the National Security Agency have certain things in common: they are civilians employed by the Department of Defense; they are engaged in projects vital to our country's communications security and intelligence production; and they all enjoy the benefits that accompany Federal employment. However, the differences between our career opportunities are just as interesting as their similarities. For example. . .

TO THE ELECTRONIC ENGINEER (BS/MS): An NSA career means delving into unique projects which can span every phase of the R&D cycle. An engineer may design, develop, test and manage contracts on FO THE COMPUTER SCIENTIST (BS/MS): It means applying his or her knowledge in a wide range of sub-disciplines such as systems design, systems programming, operating systems, computer applications analysis, and retrieval systems.

TO THE LINGUIST (BA/MA/D): A career consists of transcribing, translating, and perhaps conducting analysis and documentation projects. Slavic, Mid-Eastern, and Asian language majors can expect challenging assignments and continuing self-development. Interested in learning more about the difference in an NSA career? Schedule an interview with us through your Student Placement Office today. TO THE MATHEMATICIAN (MS): A career means defining, formulating, and solving complex communications-related problems. Statistical mathematics, matrix algebra and combinatorial analysis are just a few of the tools applied by the NSA mathematician. U.S. Citizenship is required.

Mark Ward's portrayal of bad-guy Sebastian is convincingly nasty enough, and Gonzolo, played by Derek Streeter, is a good acting job, although he reminds one a little too much of the rabbi in "Fiddler on the Roof."

Other performers in the cast also did well, no matter what the role.

Music for the production seems good enough, although the opening scene is too loud. Perhaps a little less gain would help.

All in all, "The Tempest," as produced by BYU's Theater and Cinematic Arts Department is a good job producing a hard subject in an interesting and entertaining way.

Little things that helped the total production included the lighting of the turntable set during scene changes, which was star-connecessers plays, although classics in their own right and the basis of modern theater, are usually hard to act in and sometimes hard for the audience to follow. Thus, many would-be great plays vanish into oblivion.

Costuming is great, except for Ariel's costume. While the costume design itself seems good, the outfit looks a little bit too tight in spots. Some of the tight spots could prove embarassing.

But not so in BYU's production of Shake-speare's tragicomedy, "The Tempest," which saw its opening night Thursday in the Pardoe Theater.

Not only were the actors well-versed in their lines, with only one hesitation throughout

The show revolves around the antics of a vengeful wizard, but the main wizardry in the production actually lies in the direction and scene design. Director Ivan Crosland seems to have spent many long hard hours blocking the play, and every move is timed with split-second precision, from movements of the cast to the exploding of special-effect light bombs during the play. Such precision is hoped for, but too often goes unachieved on opening night.

doe Stage were only a few feet longer, Slover could actually take off and fly. His enthusiasm and timing never stop, and neither does his characterization of Ariel. Slover is Ariel until the end, and never breaks once. The timing in "The Tem post" and the vitality with which the cast worked showed the telltale signs of remarkable direction.

Another remarkable part of the production is technical wizard Charles A. Henson's scene and lighting design, and Technical Director O. Lee Walker's construction of the set. The scene for the play is a grayish rock-type structure that serves as both stage and home for the performers. The structure not only looks impressive, but revolves for scene changes, giving the audience a new feeling with each part of the "island."

However, as in any good production, the credit for a good job lies not only with the production staff, but with the performers themselves. Great performers

WHO CAN BELONG TO THE HEALTH PLAN?

Full-time students carrying 8½ hours or more of credit during Fall and Winter semesters and 4½ credit hours during Spring and Summer terms. Also, part-time students who carry 2 hours or more of credit have the option of paying the fee for Health Center Services. They then may also purchase the Student Health Plan. The procedure to pay these fees is to apply for a fee card through the Dean of Student Life office.

WHEN DOES IT START?

For those who prepay tuition and the health plan fee, the coverage will start on the first day of new-student orientation; for those who do not prepay tuition and the health plan fee, it will start on the day those fees are paid.

WHEN DOES IT END?

Collective bargaining

The nurse says she favors collective bargaining with Utah Valley Hospital to improve the situation.

"Collective bargaining is attractive," she says, "because when people now go through regular channels as individuals to ask for higher salaries, they are welcomed to move to some other hospital."

She claims collective bargaining is necessary because "an individual nurse who speaks out about her salary is treated like a freak or given the works." Nurses who support the idea of collective bargaining admit they are in the minority, and say they don't expect it to be implemented in the immediate future. At the same time many feel that the use of collective bargaining is Utah "is inevitable."

On the other hand, most other nurses are apathetic about collective bargaining.

By SYBEL ALGER Monday Magazine Writer

Fourth District Court Judge George E. Ballif said Saturday he will file his decision "sometime Monday" on Provo City's request to ban the R-rated film because it allegedly violates the city obscenity or-A decision will be filed today on the request for a preliminary injunction against the movie "Looking for Mr. Goodbar."

Ballif heard nearly five hours of testimony in the final session of the hearing Friday; the defense called several witnesses, including an English professor and a library archivist from BYU, to support its contention that the movie has "serious artistic merit."

The U.S. Supreme Court has held that to be declared obscene, a film must meet three requirements: 1. It must appeal to the prurient interests of the average man; 2. It must be patently offensive to contemporary community standards; and, 3. It must have no redeeming artistic, social, literary or scientific value.

(The dictionary defines "prurient" as tending to excite lascivious thoughts or desires.)

'Things not compatible'

Provo City Attorney Glenn Ellis told the court "Goodbar" depicted "in all too plain terms the very acts prohibited by the (city) ordinance. The real reason for this production is to sell at the door. We

Community standards

Ellis replied, "We don't want to prohibit ideas, just specific acts."

Judge Ballif responded, "Is it your view that sex is not a legitimate topic of the cinema in our community? Shouldn't an artist have a say in how it is depicted? Are we going to take that right away from that segment of our society?"

want them to be able to make money, but not by lust and things not compatible to our community."

In his closing remarks, Ellis drew a distinction between "soft R" and "hard R" movies. " 'Hard R' movies really reach into your insides and tear at you," he said. "They are offensive. The standards of the industry are not the standards of our com-

Ellis defended the city's request to ban the film by saying, "We don't want to be book-burners — we don't consider ourselves that 'beknighted.' We're not doing this so the press can say 'Looking for Mr. Goodbar' was banned in Provo.

SENIOR YEAR.

"If these acts were done in person, they would be prohibited by law," Ellis said. "The fact they were put on celluloid and in color doesn't mean they are legal."

Artistic values

Defense attorneys Robert Maack, representing Plitt Theaters, and Allen Young, representing Paramount Pictures, took the position that artistic value overrides community standards.

Maack cited the Supreme Court decision Smith v. the United States as precedent for the view that a community "cannot impose its standards on artistic and literary value."

Maack said Provo "is trying to say 'the First Amendment doesn't apply if our standard is different than everybody else." If that was true, we wouldn't have to take this to the Supreme Court."

Several witnesses testified for the defense, including movie critics who commented on the artistic value of the film. All saw the movie before they were contacted by defense attorneys.

chalked up 26 points in CSU's winning effort.

BYU's threatened the Ram's lead several times with outstanding defensive play, changing from a zone and man-to-man in the second half and pressuring the ball effectively. Several forced shots and key steals by the Cat defense brought the Cougars close with nine minutes left in the game, but CSU managed to come back with steals of their own. For BYU, Alan Taylor pulled down a game high 13 rebounds and had sixteen points. Ainge scored 23, but managed nine rebounds. Other Cougar scorers were Keith Rice 12, Scott Runia 8, Greg Ballif 4, and Greg Anderson 2. Key turnovers LUND OPT similar rally by Wyoming during a lapse by BYU cost the Cougars the game Thursday 89-82. BYU managed to hold their own on the boards against the taller and faster Rams — rebounds were a close 44-40 in favor of CSU. But the Rams went to the charity stripe 28 times to BYU's nine, dropping in 16 of those shots to the Cougars' six, a fact that proved decisive in the game.

BYU's Danny Ainge went bucket for bucket with the highly-touted Barry Young of CSU, both putting on an excellent display of speed and shooting, before Ainge fouled out with Ainge fouled out with two minutes remaining with 23 points. Young After falling behind early in the game, BYU turned on a threatening charge to bounce back and tie the score 48-48 midway through the second half.

But a few moments later the Rams rallied with eight unanswered points and pulled away from the Cougars. City Attorney Ellis questioned the local movie critics, comments. "Experts are experts because they are being paid to be experts," he said. "Their sensibilities are somewhat dulled."

Maack also told the court he timed the "sexual interludes" in the film, "even kissing."

"In a two hour and ten minute film, I timed 12 minutes of sexual activity. There is a very strong plot, involving sex and relationships with family, etc."

During the filming of "Wedge", Keith Merrill directs Hyde Clayton in his role as a principal.

Crew members and stars prepare for a wrestling scene in "Wedge."

Hyde Clayton checks out the wardrobe of Tony Smith, who plays a wrestler in the movie.

Movie production begins

By Janetha Wilkinson Monday Magazine Writer

A vintage 1912 junior high school, with littered halls, dark empty classrooms, broken windows and creaky wooden floors, has stood abandoned in American Fork since 1975.

But, once again last week, there were pep club posters in the halls, bells ringing, chalk on the blackboards, letter jackets, math books and even talk about Friday night's wrestling meet—but there's really not any reading, writing or arithmetic

The old school has become the stage for "Wedge," a movie about caring and winning. This old building brought Keith Merrill, producer of "Great American Cowboy" and "Indian," and his partner David Johnston, President of American Film Consortium, from Los Altos Hills, Calif., to American Fork, Utah.

Building

"It's a fantasy," Keith Merrill says, "It's about the success of the underdone and we believe in it."

"It's gorgeous," Merrill said. "You couldn't build a building like this for half-a-million dollars on a sound stage. It's brick, it's old, it looks like everybody's high school — I've never met anybody who didn't say 'hey, I went to high school there."

However, no one will ever know where this "gorgeous" building is. Merrill said he is deliberately avoiding making this a "Utah" picture. "A Utah high school would be a totally different story, and we don't want to tell that story — at least

"Nobody will know by looking at the picture where it was filmed. The setting looks like somewhere in Ohio or Pennsylvania," he said. "Except we catch those beautiful snowcapped mountains once in a while, that will really throw them." The movie, written by Merrill and his brother-in-law, a wrestling coach, tells of the battle between two high school teams, of wrestling, ghettos, guts and love.

Fantasy

"It's a fantasy," Merrill said: "It's about the success of the underdogs, and we believe in it."

"A psychiatrist told me that he couldn't think of a single psychological type that 'Wedge' didn't touch on, except an old lady and a dog," Johnston said. "So now we've included a dog. We're using a bulldog as the mascot, the funniest looking dog you've ever seen. We found him in Provo, where else?"

The producers are taking advantage of some local talent including two BYU students, Gary Peterson, a senior from Cedar Fort, and Larry Miller, a junior from Bountiful. The stars of the film are Lorenzo Lamas, son of Fernando Lamas, and Maureen McCormick of the "Brady Bunch."

"I really relate to the part I'm playing,"Lorenzo Lamas says.

Abandoned school co

Two groups of high school students are portrayed. The Mingo Junction Bulldogs represent a small repressed high school that has been beaten in every sport for nine years, and decides after losing a 56-0 football game to make one last effort. Wrestlers work out in a boiler room and put together a team to do battle with a privileged upper class high school, the Rockeville Knights.

Wedge, the nickname of Nick Kilvitus (played by Lamas), a senior, overcomes his environment and everything his alcoholic father has told him was impossible to become the winning wrestler for Mingo Junction.

The remaining Bulldog line-up includes a tuba player who hates violence, contact, and everything about wrestling, and a student with a terminal illness. The coach is an English teacher who hates the team and the sport until he finally realizes that winning has nothing to do with athletics but has a lot to do with inspiration and commitment.

"Wedge" is the story of underdogs who pull together, a wrestling team that goes on to beat Rockeville, "and it's all because of a crazy move which the coach gets out of an old oriental arts book," Johnston said.

Facets

The movie revolves around several key people who will touch every viewer in a different way. "It has more facets than 'Rocky," Merrill said. 'Basically all of the good guys really win.'

Merrill and Johnston are impressed with the filmmaking possibilities in Utah. 'There is a tremendous range in Utah, from desert to snowcapped mountains," Merrill said. "I'm also very impressed with the amount of talent here, it's really growing in terms of the amount of actors available, and the quality of producing talent that's around."

About one-half of the crew are local people. "This is a very efficient operation," Johnston said. "I've never seen a crew work this way—they are totally professional. They all like what they're doing, and have their heart in it. That makes a difference."

"We can hire local people for less—carpenters, laborers—everybody costs less in Utah," Merrill said. "It may only be 50 cents an hour, but when you're talking about four months and the kind of salaries we pay, it makes a lot of difference." The production cost for the movie is more than $25,000 a

"In terms of production value, I think we're doing tremendous," Merrill said, "because we're filming in Utah, not shooting with union crews, and because of the cooperation of the school district in getting this building."

Depend slides," i gravitate ding on Utah's ability to "grease the it will be easy for the movie industry to here, according to Merrill.

The "essentials" at Mingo Junction High School are authentic. One classroom is filled with photographs of principal's offices, teacher's lounges, gymnasiums, cheerleaders and classrooms from across the state. "We want everything realistic," Jan DeWitt, property master, said.

"I went to actual high schools getting old beat-up notebooks from the lost and found, gathering wadded-up paper laying in the hallways and pulling posters off of the walls," he said. "It was really funny because the kids would follow me around asking what I was doing with their posters.

Props

"Wedge" is giving Lorenzo Lamas his first big break. After playing in "Grease" with Olivia Newton John and John Travolta, Lamas has worked in several major productions but considers "Wedge" his best bet. "Most on D.I.," he e said. "We want the details to be right."

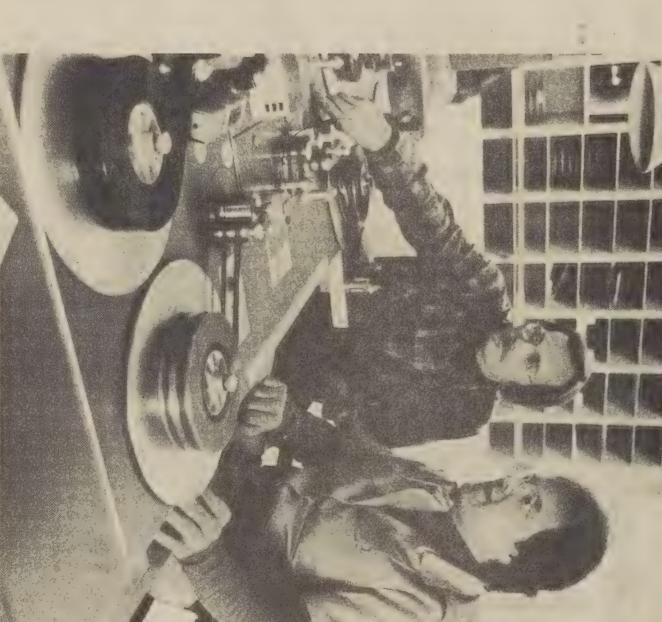

"I really relate to the part I'm playing," he said. "I feel like I know him (Wedge). I spent four years in military school where all you could see were shoes and name tags — I grew up like a blade of grass."
"I've had some of the same problems and disappointments that Nick has. He's a doer, he just keeps his mouth shut and does it. I admire that.

Filming

the next eight weeks I will become Nick

The next eight weeks will only be a short part of the production time, however. The filming in American Fork was preceded by four months of preproduction, and five months of post-production will follow. According to Johnston, "Wedge" will be released sometime in the fall of 1978.

"This'll be a great movie," Lamas said. "You'll walk out feeling really good, instead of wondering what happened to you for the past two hours."

"In Utah you work with essentials instead of excesses," he said. "In a sense it's a real secret to succesful film making."
